as we see it

What with the Senate Juvenile Delinquency Committee studying the effect of violence in television programs upon youngsters, and program syndicators being cautioned to play down mayhem in scripts, it appears that slightly less blood will be shed on TV in future months.

There still will be, however, a number of mystery and other programs one wouldn't want an impressionable five-year-old to watch.

We have always been baffled by civic groups that condemn television because some of the programs are not fit for children's eyes. These groups never criticize parents who permit their children to view such programs. They confine their harsh words to the medium.

According to this thinking, parents who wouldn't consider taking their youngsters to a gangster or horror movie are not supposed to be responsible for keeping the kiddies away from the same movies on television.

It is quite true that some dramatic programs ordinarily acceptable for children's viewing sometimes turn up with a murder or horror play. At such times parents have little opportunity to control what their offspring are watching.

Perhaps it might be wise for such dramatic programs to indicate at the outset of the play that it is not intended for children. That would give fair warning to parents.

In other cases, however, parents should know from the very nature of the program that there will be violence in it. Then, in our opinion, it is up to parents to decide whether their children may be adversely affected by what they see.

TV's Hollywood's Mickey Rooney

A recent honored guest at one of the sand-blown watering places in Las Vegas, a prosperous suburb in the Great American Desert, was a husky little bantam clad in dirty white ducks, a T-shirt and a once-white sombrero. He bounced about the premises, a rather incongruous picture among the flashily garbed visitors to the luxurious spa — the plush Flamingo Hotel — with the air of a happy salesman who had just closed one deal and was starting another. His name was Mickey Rooney.

Mickey's presence was designed to bring in the customers, which it did. For three weeks he and his troupe put on two shows a night, seven nights a week. The troupe was no great shakes, but Mickey had 'em rolling in the aisles with an act he dreamed up with his partner, Joey Forman, and which he rehearsed while shooting three TV film shows in six days when he wasn't busy working out pre-production problems for his next feature picture, which started shooting the day after he returned to Hollywood from Las Vegas. Three weeks later, the picture completed, he went back to making more TV films.

Never a dull moment: on The Mickey Rooney Show, anything can happen.

Mickey, now going on 34, graying at the temples, fattening a bit about the belt region and still constitutionally incapable of standing, sitting or lying in one position for more than 15 seconds, is perhaps the closest thing to a human dynamo since the days of fighter Henry Armstrong. Time was when the dynamo was largely activated by a chip on the shoulder the size of a small barn door.

Lying (sitting, squatting, standing, kneeling, sprawling) on the man-made grass surrounding an elaborate swimming hole, Mickey frisked around the perimeter of his career with the restless air of a fighter trying to go the full 15 rounds in the first three minutes.

"I've been in show business 32 years, thank heavens," he said. "I love it. I'm the greatest booster there is for the movies and TV. We go to all the pictures and we watch all the shows. People today are too darned hypercritical. They figure every show has to be great, and if it isn't, it's lousy. Me, I love everybody. I wish Elaine had been the first girl in my life, things would have been a lot different. Alimony is like giving oats to a dead horse."

Elaine is Elaine Mahnken Rooney, an exceptionally pretty redhead from Compton, Cal., with a scrubbed, hometown look. From the time she became Mickey's fourth wife, the size of that chip on the shoulder has been in a state of steady decline.

"Elaine," one of Mickey's close friends says, firmly, "is the best thing that ever happened to the kid. He knows more about show business and less about women than anyone I've ever known. When he found Elaine, he found the jackpot."

Mickey himself is both keenly and happily aware of the change Elaine has wrought in him. Born and brought up in Compton and a graduate of Compton Junior College, she was as far removed from show business as Mickey was from the atmosphere of the Hardy family he "lived" with for 12 years at M-G-M. Under her firm but apparently gentle hand, he has given up his smoking, his gambling and his money. Rooney, once the little terror of Hollywood, now has three piggy banks scattered about his Woodland Hills home, and he empties his pockets into them every night.

"When I first knew Mickey," Elaine says, "he thought nothing of throwing a hundred dollar bill onto a Las Vegas dice table. Now he bets a five, and he has to come to me to get it. I never had much money, so I'm just naturally careful with it."

Mickey's tremendous enthusiasm for life has been channeled into strange ports for a guy who once boasted of having two movie stars (Ava Gardner and Martha Vickers) and a beauty contest winner (towering Betty Jane Rase), as his one-at-a-time wives.

"Mickey Rooney Enterprises is a real going proposition," he says, the pride squeaking out all over. "We'll do 39 Mickey Rooney Show films for NBC. We're financing two pilot films: Date Line Tokyo, with Dane Clark, and The Magic Lantern, starring Sabu. We're gonna do a picture called 'The Atomic Kid.' And I've got two more scripts ready to go. I'm reaching the point—honest—where I get my kicks watching the new kids coming up."

Mickey's TV show, which has been two years in the planning, is based on his characterization of Mickey Mulligan, a network page. The permanent cast includes Regis Toomey and Claire Carleton as his parents, Joey Forman as his pal, John Hubbard as his boss and a pert newcomer, Carla Balenda, as a network secretary and his girl. The pilot film, which the Hollywood wheels all got a look at last spring, is generally called one of the funniest half-hour films ever.

If the rest are as good, Rooney has all the makings of the show of the year on his hands. The lone stumbling block is the fact that he is spotted smack opposite Jackie Gleason Saturday nights. The Mickey of old would have jutted his chin and snapped, "I'll murder that bum." Instead, he shakes his head admiringly and says, "That Gleason, he's one of the greatest. I hope I can do just half as good."

This is a far cry from the chip-toting Rooney who tried to elbow his way back into Hollywood's upper ranks after World War II, wagging his jaw and dragging his talent behind him. The "Hardy" films had about worn out their welcome with the general public, and so had Mickey. He was too old to go on being Andy Hardy, too young for the dramatic parts he wanted. When he was neither getting married nor getting divorced, he was making bad pictures.

"That was a real dry spot, that postwar period," Mickey says now, "but I sure learned a lot from it. And I even got a second chance. How many guys are that lucky?"

WE ASKED THEM

Why Are Similar Shows Telecast At Same Time?

Tom McAvity, vice-president in charge of programs, NBC-TV: "We're out to get top ratings every night, by putting our best shows forward, no matter what other networks offer. We know this will distress some viewers, but it can't be helped under our present system of broadcasting."

Hubbell Robinson, Jr., vice-president in charge of programs, CBS-TV: "Putting similar shows on the air at the same time makes for healthy competition. Viewers benefit because both programs will be better. To my knowledge, CBS has never programmed a show specifically to weaken a competing one. But conflicts can't be helped."

Robert Montgomery, producer of Robert Montgomery Presents: "Having our show on the air during part of the time that another popular dramatic program is being telecast does not make me unhappy. I have always found competition stimulating and challenging — keeps one on one's toes."

Felix Jackson, producer of Studio One: "What makes us apprehensive is the possibility the Montgomery program may do the same type of show we're doing. We're very conscious of the fact we're on against a strong show. So we try to make each Studio One as good as possible, to attract as big an audience as we can."

Sam Fuller, NBC executive, ex-Comedy Hour producer: "The big factor is the crowded program schedules. Time is all gone. I think NBC has discovered one way to overcome inflexible program schedules—the 'spectaculars.' We're in the advertising as well as the entertaining business."

Ed Sullivan, producer-emcee, Toast of the Town: "So long as there is no monopoly in broadcasting, this situation will prevail. A network cannot 'black out' because a competing network has a strong program on the air at a given time. If a show had no competition, it would get flabby. Viewers are always the gainers."

Roger Price is the TV comedian with shell-rimmed glasses who doesn't chat with a chimpanzee, doesn't boast "Q." as a middle initial, and doesn't go home these days to a brand-new wife named Jayne Meadows.

What Price does do is draw. The offbeat funnyman has parlayed his "Droodles" (scribbles and scrawls which always mean much, much more than first meets the eye) into lucrative show business engagements, including a long series of guest spots with Garry Moore; published volumes; illustrated cocktail napkins, and a syndicated newspaper feature. Right now Droodles are puzzling panelists on a weekly NBC quiz show tagged, logically enough, Droodles.

WHAT HAPPENED WHEN BOY MET GIRL ON 'SUMMER HOLIDAY'

Summer Holiday and Song Snapshots from a Summer Holiday—alternating titles for the same show, different nights—are filled with the patter of songs and feet and are really just an excuse for Betty Ann Grove and Merv Griffin to entertain. Both shows are good reason for getting together these two, who met for the first time just before the contracts were signed.

Betty Ann has been known to TV viewers an amazingly long time, considering her years (25): for her dancing and singing on The Big Payoff, and as one of a series of Red Buttons' girl friends.

Although she's just beginning to get top recognition, Betty was on and Dances by Grove + Griffin

Stop the Music for three years, on The Stork Club for awhile, and, on Broadway, she replaced Lisa Kirk in Kiss Me Kate. Recently offered the lead in a new Broadway show, she turned it down to stay in TV. "Besides, I was offered half of what I could make on one show on TV."

Before all this, Betty commuted between New York, where she auditioned weekly for jobs, and Boston, her home town, where she played club dates. "I didn't think anything of the long trek then," Betty says candidly, "But you must realize I was young."

When Merv talks about how he got into show business, it sounds as though he merely dreamed up the whole thing.

A native of San Mateo, California, he was attending the University of San Francisco, and, bored, decided to liven things a little by applying for a job with the local radio station as a piano player. He played well enough, but it developed that the station needed a singer. A versatile lad, he sang for them, became gainfully employed.

Enterprising, too, he started going out with the band to local night clubs; when he found he could earn $1200 a week just for singing, he gave up college. This led to one-night stands touring the country with the Freddy Martin Band; to New York, Las Vegas and to Hollywood, where he was hired by Warner Brothers as a singer. After one singing role in the Grace Moore story, So This Is Love, he was cast in a series of Westerns. "No reflection on my singing!" Merv hastens to add.

He was in his rented Hollywood house one evening with three friends, each suddenly and unequivocably bored—for the moment—with doing nothing. They said, "Let's go," and did. Within four hours they were packed and driving East.

Betty and Merv were brought together by Byron Paul, producer of The Jane Froman Show, and Irving Mansfield, the show's creator. Mansfield remembered Merv for his singing in the Grace Moore picture and for his song hit, "I've Got a Lovely Bunch of Coconuts."

Betty had been considered for the summer replacement ever since she substituted for Jane Froman one week. "It was just a matter of finding a boy," Byron says. "I'm quite excited. They're both young, fresh, work well together, work well independently. And I've never met two people who are easier to get along with." So it is not surprising that they were signed to pinch-hit for Jo Stafford, too.

Neither is married, engaged or even attached (at this writing). Betty lives with her mother in midtown Manhattan, studies singing and says that she doesn't have much time for a social life. She's also seriously studying the art of being a straight man—well, girl.

"I didn't know it could be so difficult," she says. "If you don't deliver exactly right, you leave your partner with egg on his face, and then you'd better run."

Lighting up a PALL MALL just naturally goes with that feeling of satisfaction you get from a job well done. For PALL MALL pays you a rich reward in smoking pleasure—an extra measure of cigarette goodness.

Longer, yes . . . but greater length is only half the story

PALL MALLS are made longer—to travel the smoke further—to make it cooler and sweeter for you.

But you get more than greater length. Fine tobacco is its own best filter. And PALL MALL's richly-flavorful tobaccos are the finest quality money can buy. That's why PALL MALL gives you a smoothness, mildness, and satisfaction no other cigarette—long or short—can offer you.

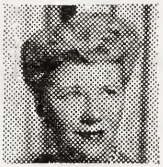
Channel Chatter: Present plans call for the completion of Crosley's weather station by September 6, at which date Jim Fidler, WLW-TV's meteorologist, will begin his regularly scheduled weathercasts to the Crosley stations three times during the day. With Jim Thomas, the Outdoor Rambler now on ⑨, his alma mater WKRC-TV is reported readying a replacement.



RUTH LYONS

Gene Tierney will make her television debut on TV Theater, Sunday, September 26, at 8 P.M. on [7], ⑩ and ⑫. WCET, Cincinnati's educational station, will televise the local high school game of the week starting September 10. The games will be telecast direct from Trechter Stadium in Cincinnati and after the opening game will be either on a Friday or Saturday night. Incidentally, everyone including the commercial VHF stations are rooting for the success of this channel. News soon to be released will prove how a community can get behind educational TV to help to make it succeed.

On September 13, The Medic, a revolutionary type of film drama will make its debut on [2], ④ and ⑤. This series of dramatizations of medical case histories will be filmed in actual hospitals and doctor's offices and will present the struggles and achievements of the medical profession.

WKRC-TV's campaign to match in silver the weight of polio victim Sylvia, will go over the top with more than her ninety pounds in cash. WBNS-TV, celebrated the first colorcast in central Ohio, by bringing the Ed Sullivan Toast of the Town to those lucky few now owning color sets.

Personalities: Ruth Lyons, who spent the month of August in Hawaii, returns to her show on Labor Day, September 6. Liberace returns to Cincinnati on ⑨ on October 1. This should put many female minds to rest, Incidentally, he will appear with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra on November 5 and 6.

Cool, boy, cool: Eddie Fisher dousing his life-long friend, Bernie Rich, in swank pool.

Still A Nice Kid?

Eddie Fisher, Millionaire

Once in every 10 or 15 years, the entertainment world comes up with a bona-fide Golden Boy who can do no wrong. He is generally a singer, for a singer has both immediate and constant contact with the public. Latest entry in the Golden Boy sweepstakes is, of course, Eddie Fisher.

Fisher, at 26, is already a smart young show-business operator. He has grasped the essentials firmly and quickly—up to and including the fact that it doesn't hurt to romance a pretty young movie star—and maintains a perpetually happy air of get-a-load-of-this-for-Heaven's-sake. Whether or not Fisher asks himself serious questions when he goes to bed at night is something only he can say. On the surface, he is a happy young kid who is delighted with the way things are going.

"I love every minute of it," he says, the innocent wide eyes belied just a little bit by a knowing grin.

He should, for he is living the dream of every young kid—money, fame, fortune, adulation, all in gross lots and none particularly hard come-by.

This past summer Fisher spent in Beverly Hills, Cal., where the people who live north of Sunset Boulevard are just a touch more conscious of their social status than those who live to the south. Fisher rented a medium-sized white colonial mansion in Coldwater Canyon, north, and spent six weeks living it up.

There was a touch of the phony in the whole setup, although it was not anything that sprang from Fisher himself. The house, with its pool and terrace, was something of a mecca. Song pluggers, record executives, disc jockeys, reporters, TV people—all had a way of dropping by. Nobody bothered with introductions.

The center of attraction, Fisher carried it off with an easy grace. If he has not yet acquired the polish of an older man, he comes off even better with his natural air of friendliness. The fact of the matter is that he is wholeheartedly in love with his good fortune, and it shows without being offensive. He is a kid having a ball. His feet have yet to start hurting.

When they do start hurting, young Eddie will be face-to-face with the brass tacks of show-business life. Frank Sinatra, the last genuine Golden Boy prior to Fisher, wasn't quite up to taking it, and went through a long and unhappy siege of bad press relations, unfortunate gangland associations and a Sunday-supplement marriage that did him no good whatsoever. The initial glitter, in short, went straight to Sinatra's head.

The head of the current No. 1 Million Dollar Golden Boy seems, for the time being, still pretty well set on his shoulders. Actually, he is too busy to do anything except what he is told and his advisors to date have been on the right track. He has two radio and two TV shows a week for Coca-Cola and records for RCA Victor. He does personal appearances when he can squeeze them in and makes at least a pretense of reading movie scripts submitted to him. His business manager has the final say on them—and the final say thus far has been no.

This, too, has been all right with Fisher. A dozen years ago he was a huckster—literally—helping his father with a fruit-and-grocery wagon in the streets of South Philadelphia. His first singing job was with a local radio station for $18 a week. And in 1949, when he and a boyhood friend, Bernie Rich, were entertaining the tourists at Grossinger's in New York's Catskill Mountains, Eddie Cantor found him, claimed him for his own and put him on the high road to glory, as it were. The records Fisher made prior to being hauled into the Army in 1951 were more than enough to keep his career alive while he was out of things. Two years later, he left his $90-a-month Army job on a Thursday morning, and that night took up a $7500-a-week engagement at New York's Paramount Theater. "Can you imagine something like that happening in Russia?" he asks.

The Fishers, father and son: 12 years ago they were South Philadelphia hucksters.

Just recently Irving Berlin talked seriously with Eddie about the possibility of the young singer's starring in a two-hour, four-network TV extravaganza called "The Irving Berlin Story." This is equivalent to being knighted.

Yet the people most consistently in evidence around the Fisher pool this past summer were not the Cantors and the Berlins. The two regulars were the elder Fisher, whom Eddie still calls "Daddy," and Bernie Rich, an aspiring dramatic actor, still looking for his big break. Eddie, his childhood buddy, has made it. "If this guy starts changing," Bernie says, "I will personally bash his head in."

The consensus around Hollywood, from press agents to record executives to trade paper columnists, is that Fisher is a "nice kid." Fisher himself, quite aware of the tag, still takes pains to live up to it. His romance with M-G-M star Debbie Reynolds is something he grins about, answering all questions with "I don't know." Asked if he doesn't like to get back to normal now and again and maybe just slip off to a movie with his girl, Eddie gives the definite impression that he wants no part of normal—not now, anyway.

So far as money is concerned, Fisher seems quite unconcerned. His big splurges to date have been a home for his parents in Philadelphia, a shiny black 1954 Cadillac convertible for himself and his recent jaunt to Europe "to rest." His business manager pays all the bills, keeps Eddie on a reasonable allowance and takes care of the long-range investments. Longest of them is rumored to be a Coca-Cola franchise—an investment which all by itself can keep a man well stocked in steak dinners and swimming pools.

Community antenna looms high against sky.

TV Party Line

HOW IT BRINGS ENTERTAINMENT TO 'ISOLATED' COMMUNITIES

This may come as a staggering blow to you, but nevertheless, it's a fact that there are 10,000,000 Americans alive today who have no access to the blessings of free television.

These unfortunates live in isolated communities barricaded from TV by mountains or by desert distances.

In this primeval wilderness, however, there is luckily an oasis—just over the next hill. There, to 10,000,000 nomads in a non-televised world, soon will come Godfrey, and Jackie Gleason and I Love Lucy—all because of a set-up known as the Community Television Antenna System.

Community antennas are practically guaranteed to bring the murkiest images, the faintest wheezes and the most bedraggled cliches of the screen into pin-point sharpness—no matter what the natural barrier. Here's how:

First, a community is picked in a fringe area where television reception is weak—or even nonexistent—due to geographical impedimenta or impressive distances. Next, a receiving tower is constructed on the highest available point (preferably a mountain peak) to pick up signals from remote network stations. Amplifiers are then established to build up the signals at this receiving point and, by means of a coaxial cable strung along telephone and power company lines, to distribute the signals to those subscribers in the community. If you live out of the range of television stations, it will cost you approximately $120 to install network programs in your home, plus about $3.50 a month to maintain the service.

The system is customarily installed by one of the several large electronics corporations which make a practice of this sort of thing. After the installation has been completed, the corporation attempts to persuade local capital to move in on an operative basis.

At present there are 300 community antenna systems operating in the U.S. They service more than 150,000 homes. This represents a market of approximately $45,000,000 in television set sales and an investment of $25,000,000 in tower and cable construction. So far, the systems have been set up in sections of 34 states and in Canada.

Most residents of non-television areas greet the prospect of community antenna installations in their towns with enthusiasm bordering on mania.

In one Appalachian Mountain community, for instance, every family but two stampeded to the local TV store to buy sets the day the antenna system was installed. One of the two taxpayers who didn't show up was in the county hospital and the other, a retired university professor, said he just wasn't interested.

But the rest of the town made a show of it. They bought every set on display in the TV store and they flooded its proprietor with orders for more. They staged an informal parade. They made speeches in front of the Civil War monuments, and the mayor installed a set on the mall at City Hall. The justice of the peace passed out speeding fines while watching Garry Moore on a screen hidden under his bench, and the boys in the general store were silent as they watched the antics of Red Buttons.

This went on for a week. Then, suddenly, the town returned to normal. And looking back now, its residents can think about the great day of TV's arrival with healthy complacency.

"Television," the mayor said, the other day "is something the people of this town can take or leave alone. Like any other field of entertainment, it has its place—but that place is purely a secondary one in the well-rounded life of this community."

"You'll have to excuse me now," His Honor continued. "I've got to get home. Groucho's on in ten minutes."

She Goes For Cops

DOROTHY ABBOTT LOVES ONE ON 'DRAGNET' AND ANOTHER IN REAL LIFE

Dorothy Abbott: her life, well policed.

Given the bald record, unembellished, Dorothy Abbott is perhaps the last girl in Hollywood a producer would pick to play the role of Sgt. Joe Friday's girl on Dragnet. The lone reason that might have mitigated in her favor, in fact, was unknown to Webb at the time he picked her. She is, of all things, the wife of a cop—and a cop whose cases have twice been dramatized on Dragnet, at that.

Dorothy, actually, was a very casual selection. She appeared on the show one week as a model. No lines, no real part. Webb, however, liked her fresh appeal and called her back to read for the newly created role of Ann Baker. She got it.

In it, she is cast as a rather sweet, unassuming girl who would like very much to get married but who is pretty well resigned to the fact that Friday is going to take his own good time getting around to it. What Ann doesn't know, however, and what Dorothy does know, is that Webb has no intention of getting Friday married off.

Webb just doesn't want the show to be forced into a position of virtually featuring a romantic interest and will keep Ann Baker's appearances down to the minimum necessary to make the point that Friday is, indeed, a human being and not averse to the company of a pretty girl.

While it was wholly unintentional, Webb's casting of Dorothy Abbott in the role follows his habit of latching onto people who look and feel the part rather than concentrating on well-known name actors who might conceivably aid the box-office draw.

Dorothy and cops: on camera, her fiance ▶ is Sgt. Joe Friday. At home (far right), she's wife of Detective Rudy Diaz.

Dorothy is not, in the strict Hollywood sense, a career actress.

A tall, rather willowy girl who can be made to look deceptively short, she came to Hollywood 10 years ago from her native Kansas City, all fired up to be a great dramatic actress. Almost before she knew it, however, she found herself in the real-estate business, buying up a dilapidated duplex (Los Angeles version of the two-family house), refurbishing it and renting it. She now owns several such, is a licensed real-estate salesman and is currently thinking of tossing in her lot with one of Hollywood's bigger and better-known realtors.

Somewhere along the way, however, she did wangle a year's contract at Paramount, where she appeared as a show girl in 'Road to Rio.' That was followed by an M-G-M contract (she was a show girl in several musicals) and she just recently finished still another stint as a show girl in Ethel Merman's, "There's No Business Like Show Business," at Fox.

Several years ago she put in two months as a Las Vegas show girl at the Flamingo Hotel, where she quickly earned the name of The Girl with the Golden Arm. "In Las Vegas," she explains, "you just naturally gamble whether you're a gambler or not. So I stood around the tables with my little nickels and dimes and all of a sudden found myself on a winning streak. I just couldn't lose. People kept making side bets on me and several of them made far more money on my luck than I did, myself."

Two years later, in Houston, Dorothy was stopped by a man. "I know you," he said. "You're The Girl with the Golden Arm out at Vegas."

"What a reputation," she blinks, "for Friday's girl!"

Dorothy's husband, Rudy Diaz, was for five years a member of the narcotics squad of the Los Angeles Police Department. "He's on felony now," she explains, "for the narcotics men get to be too well known to the dope peddlers. He was pretty well-known, too, for his name was used twice on Dragnet—long before I was on it.

Being married to a real cop and engaged to a fictional one, however, still hasn't been enough to indoctrinate Dorothy on the subject of how to be one. She once talked her husband into taking her along on a case. He was posing as a dope buyer and was to meet a peddler outside a theater. "Whatever you do," he warned her, "don't call me Rudy. These boys know that name. To this guy tonight I'm Joe. Don't forget it."

Naturally, she forgot it. The peddler took off with a vast show of speed.

"Rudy didn't speak to me for three days," Dorothy says. "And I never did have the courage to tell Jack Webb about it. He'd probably figure an idiot girl like me had no business being involved with Joe Friday."

What's In A Word?

Clifton Fadiman and panelists: the game is to guess why the program is on the air.

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

There is no excuse whatever, at this late date, for a great big, grown-up network like CBS to be bilking the public with something like What's in a Word? Its basic format—a panel of professional sophisticates being coy about a guessing game—is so tired it veritably yawns.

The panelists themselves go through the motions like so many automatons. Even the ubiquitous Faye Emerson, who generally can be sprightly under even the most horrible circumstances, can't spright her way out of this one.

The point of What's in a Word?, if there is a point, is to have the panelists guess the word being thought of by a member of the studio audience. The panel is given a one-word clue, then a second clue, then a third—and a fourth, if they are being particularly stupid. Having gone through the words "one," "small," "ground" and "round"' before coming up with the correct answer, "meatball," the panel then gets something in the nature of a bonus quiz. They are challenged to think of a certain word which rhymes with the key word, and again they are given a clue. In the unfortunate meatball episode, the rhyming word was "AWOL." If you weren't in the Army, just forget the whole thing. It's really not worth understanding, anyway.

Greatest puzzle here is not the words to be guessed but the presence of Clifton Fadiman as the moderator, or panel-whipper. Why a man of his erudition, wit and intelligence should allow himself to be dragged within 40 miles of such a show as this, stacks up as the major programming mystery of the summer season.

Romantic footnotes are sought by Bert Parks from engaged couple.

Two In Love

Two in Love is a blood brother to Bride and Groom, a first cousin to This Is Your Life and no kin whatsoever to creditable television.

With apologies to no one, but presumably with at least the grudging consent of all concerned, the show puts a rather glaring spotlight on a young engaged couple, dragged into it all by doting, we-want-to-get-on-television friends. One by one the friends get up in front of the camera and tell intimate details about how this couple met or why they want to get married or why they really deserve the money more than anybody else.

There is, of course, money involved. It is called a nest egg, naturally, and is amassed through a quiz process involving the friends, the usual questions, the inevitable race against a ticking clock. Between questions, the hapless groom-to-be is expected to tell a lot of gawking strangers exactly what he said to his girl when he asked her to marry him and she, in turn, is expected to quote verbatim her own dialogue at the time.

The emcee is veteran Bert Parks, who apparently can brazen his way through anything.—D.J.
